

Russia, Rights, and Liberty

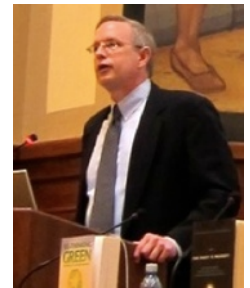

Economics - Debate - History - Geography

Austin Economic Thinking Workshop

- Friday, October 1 • 1:30 – 8:30 pm • Hope Chapel, 6701 Arroyo Seco, Austin
- Cost: $20 per student, $10 for siblings (no charge for parents). Pizza dinner $5.
- Register via Austin Rhetoric Club: www.austinheticclub.org

Join us for an Economic Thinking Workshop exploring economics, current events, and international issues. For students researching U.S./Russia policy topic, this workshop will discuss Russian history, economics, and institutions, including Russia's long and destructive experience under communism. Presentations will also discuss government legitimacy, popular sovereignty and protecting rights. This workshop will appeal to a wide audience of students interested in public policy and world affairs.

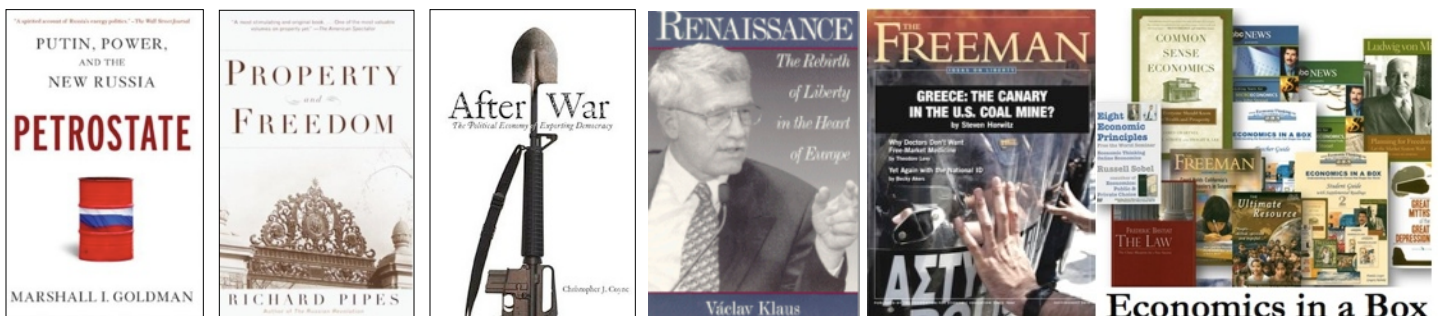

Gregory Rehmke directs programs for

What U.S. policies would best encourage economic freedom and the rule of law for the Russian people?

Readings at: www.EconomicThinking.org/Russia

If you have questions about the seminar, or would like further information, please contact Greg Rehmke (grehmke@gmail.com) or Pam Cooper.

More than 5,000 homeschool students and parents have attended FEE and Economic Thinking programs, and over 200 homeschool families have purchased Economics in a Box, our 16-week high-school level economics course. This year a 4-week Russia economics course is available via online presentations and videos.

Economics in a Box